Evangelism In The Early Church

In Michael Green's seminal Evangelism in the Early Church (2nd ed, Eerdmans, 2003), he shows that early Christianity's explosive growth "was in reality accomplished by means of informal missionaries." (Green, p.243) That is, Christian laypeople, not trained preachers and evangelists, carried on the mission of the church "not through formal preaching, but informal" conversation — "in homes and wine shops, on walks, and around market stalls... they did it naturally, enthusiastically...

A Church that is pure in the world fits the first qualification for effective evangelism. Now, God did the purifying in the case of chapter 5 there, and I think God still does some purifying in the Church. We read in the book of Hebrews that everyone whom He loves He chastens. He scourges every son.
