Pleasure (Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy)

And so all that he does, he does, not under constraint, but according to his own good pleasure. He is free, and he takes pleasure in all that he does. Today we focus on one of the most astonishing things that God has done: he has created the universe, and what a universe it is! And there are two questions that I want to try to answer:

God's covenant with Israel at Sinai was very much conditional, as it was based on their obedience, and His promises to bless them depended on whether or not they kept His commands (Leviticus 3). The Old Testament records the consequences Israel experienced when they kept or broke the covenant (Deuteronomy 8:19-20; Daniel 9:11-12).

Earlier in the year, business was booming at Lam's then-six-station salon, where she and her husband regularly worked 10- or 12-hour days and split schedules and day care responsibilities for their sons, ages 2 and 3. As the virus crept into a nearby community, Lam said she shut her doors, even before they were ordered to do so.
